Course Overview

More and more companies are outsourcing large “pieces” of projects to third parties. The need for contract and procurement management has never been higher. When part of a project is bought from another organization, an additional layer of complexity and risk is introduced to the project. This course focuses on the special requirements of projects involving external contracting. This course also provides the basics for effectively managing the financial aspects of the project. Through group discussion, workshops and real world examples, participants use tools and basic methods for identifying, estimating, tracking and managing all project cost
