Course Overview

Human Resource departments are increasingly expected to use data, automation and digital tools to improve recruitment, employee engagement, performance management and workforce planning. AI offers powerful opportunities to modernize HR operations while improving fairness, speed and decision-making.

This Magna Skills course explores how AI can support HR professionals in recruitment, onboarding, learning and development, staff performance, HR analytics, policy drafting and employee communication.

The course also addresses the human side of AI adoption, including ethics, bias, employee privacy, change management and the future of work. Participants will learn how to use AI responsibly without replacing the importance of professional HR judgment.

Course Outcomes

Course Outcomes

1. Apply AI tools to improve HR operations, communication and workforce administration.
2. Use AI to support recruitment, onboarding, job descriptions and employee documentation.
3. Analyze workforce trends, skills gaps, training needs and performance information.
4. Improve employee engagement, learning and development through AI-supported tools.
5. Manage AI-related HR risks, including bias, fairness, privacy and ethical decision-making.
